

SEX LIKE THIS PODCAST

THE TRAILER

Interviewee: It's so weird to lose brain function because you just always assume that you have control over yourself and when you don't and you actually are going out of control, there is no way to stop it.

[intro music]

Host : There are over 7 billion people on the planet. And most of us are looking for love. So if we all couple off - you know, unless you've come up with a much more interesting arrangement - that means there theoretically about three and a half billion people in the world that could be the one for you. And counting. So with all these options, why do we always hear the same love stories? The abled-bodied, hetero, storybook version of what it's like to fall in love is told over and over and over again. Well friends that stops here. You're listening to Sex Like This a podcast brought to you by Uncomfortable Revolution about sex and dating with a chronic illness or disability. I'm your host, health journalist, Nicole Edwards.
